Description:

From Library Journal Smith discusses the careers of 20 favorite female television stars of the 1960s, including Sally Field, Mary Tyler Moore, and Goldie Hawn. As the title suggests, the style is that of a 1960s teen magazine. Like one of those, the book aims to satisfy the curiosity of devoted fans who might wonder which of the men stranded on Gilligan's Island would have been the best match for Mary Ann and what Diana Rigg has done since leaving The Avengers. Some nostalgic baby boomers will find this book irresistible (although they might deny it in public), so public libraries might want it. Interesting, but not essential.
